Resentful Spirit Lurking in Hearts Of Huns After Peace

Scuttling Ships at Sca pa Flow, Burning of French Battle Flags, Comments of Press and Public Men Show Enmity.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS.

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) The circumstances immediately surrounding the German decision to sign the treaty of Versailles, the scuttling of the ships in Scapa Flow, the burning of the French battle flags, above all, the comment of the German press and public men demonstrate clearly in what spirit Germany accepts peace. We are, then, not in the presence of a defeated enemy, which bows to the decision of arms, as France bowed to Europe's decrees when Napoleon had lost Waterloo and gone to St. Helena. What we have to deal with for many years to come is a sullen, resentful, unrepentent Germany, a Germany awaiting only the chance to re verse the decisions of the recent conflict.

The sessential then, at the outset of a new period in world history to lay aside certain illusions fostered during the war and cherished for a time, after Germany had yielded han November. We have not before us a promble of a new age; we have not liquidated the old quarrels out of which the present war grew, we have not settled questions that the saltans will the old problems. But the Raltans will the old problems that the present war grew, we have not settled questions that France would never be able to cross her pathway again.

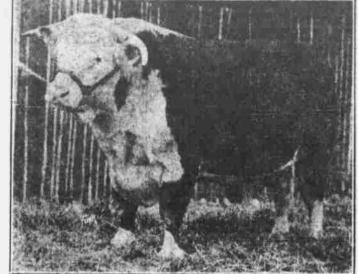

Bitter Against France.

All this is possible for Germany, if

France support her claims, even to the extent of new military operations, without benefit and bound it impose new expenses upon themselves? Germany means to try it out But without these financial reparations France is well nigh ruined and if the United States and Great Britain do not support France, then there is an immediate breach in the alliance which only while it is an alliance can maintain the document of Versailles in tuli force.

If France does not obtain reparation, if she is not indemnified for the wanton destruction of her industrial districts nothing seems more certain than that the suffering which will follow in France will lead to national bankruptcy and not improbably revolution. But this
